Little Chance of Gans-Nelson Battle To Morrow Going Anywhere Near the Limit of the Forty-five Rounds.

Gans and Nelson will hear forty-fifth round to-morrow afternoon at Colma. Long before the scheduled three hours of fighting are finished either the great negro champion or the rugged Dane will have taken the ten count.

forty-five rounds means. Imagine three solid hours of it—the men strugling, clashing, swaying about in the hot sun, their brains dazed with the continual tapping of the jabs and vio lent jar of hook and swing and uppercut. The Marathon race that winds up the great Olympic Games with what is supposed to be the severest test of stamina and manly courage is mere child's play beside it. In the Marathon en run for a period of time varying between two hours and a half and three hours. They jog along at a swift, even pace, occasionally taking a drink or a imulant from their attendants, just as fighters, in their corners, are bathed and fanned. There are no minutes of rest for the Marathon runners, but they are not compelled to go on and on in spite of smashing blows in the body that jar the breath out of them. If they tire they can slow up until they recover. Gans and Nelson absolutely cannot slow up or show a trace of fatigue. To do that would mean sudden redoubling of exertion by the other man, and a speedy knockout. The fighters must go on at their best pace until one or the other falls heavily, unconscious utterly dazed and exhausted and

It may be said that probably no other to find a crap game. For the first eight rounds Joe Gans tried his best to land a quick knockout. He hit Nelson as hard well known as that on Frederic Thompson's Shamrock. a quick knockout. He hit Nelson as hard son's Shamrock. and as fast as he could send the blows Here's a partial list: Charley Barr. in, and Neisen was easy for the old master to hit. At the end of the eighth round Gans came to the conclusion that he had met a specimen of the human race entirely unlike any other in all of the Feliance under "Capt. Charley" in the great America's Cup races, and his long ring experience; that Nelson in the great America's Cup races, and pould not be knocked out in a punch; that his only chance of whipping the Dane lay in slowly tapping him down.

After that eighth round Gans, always SHEEPSHEAD BAY ENTRIES. the master when it came to boxing, deliberately rested and forced Nelson to was, too. That game suited him down to the heels. He rushed at Gans, head PERST RA jous obstinacy, and when he was beaten off he rushed back again as doggedly as before. Nelson did this for forty rounds. and then at last he began to weaken. But Gans was tired, too, although he had not taken a tenth of the pounding that Nelson ate un. Gans was too tired to put over the knockout wallop. The fight was becoming a wearlsome exhibition, with the black man and the white leaning against each other and tre white to get home a deciding blow with arms that were slow in following the fagged and weary action of the brain. Then came the foul and the unsatisfactory end of the fight.

W ILL Nelson have the same stamina this time? That's the question, and the man who can answer it can name the winner. It is a fact that Nelson hasn't shown the same old ability to wallow in punishment that he had before the great battle with Gans. It seems that Gans hammered some of the marvellous had him out, a year later, in 'Frisco and Britt never was the punisher that Gans is. Unhoiz, too, in Los Angeles, beat Nelson badly in ten rounds. But nobody has succeeded in making Nelson lie down long enough for the referee to reel off ten seconds. Gans will have to do that to win at Comma. In forty-five rounds it will be a case of knock out or be knocked out

A S far as age in the ring is con-cerned. Gans is far older than Nelson. Gans has been lighting for seventeen years, Nelson for twelve. Gans is thirty-four years old, Nelson twenty-six. Yet followers of ring affairs are inclined to regard the durable Dane | FIFTH RACE Then Firenze for state older man physically, because he and a bail juff ourse. as the older man physically, because he takes a lot or punishment in every night.
